Hi,

Whatever ends up being developed on the former Dairy Crest site needs to be of the moment and geared towards the coming necessity of the Town to have local resilience. The Atmos project was ahead of its time in this regard, focusing on 'truly' affordable housing and jobs (for young families especially.)

I want to see community training initiatives and the restoration of the Brunel Building. It has to unite the Town by giving the people a belief in sustainability. I want to see a development that can deal with the issues of now and the near future. And that means an energy centre and sustainable transport hub.

Best,

Mark
